

The relation between what we see and what we know is never settled. John Berger

Across the Dyfi estuary charcoal clouds may veil the wind turbines — I know this, but until they lift must see a hill of crucifixions; an angry god bearing down.

